Sometimes she is like sherry, like the sun through a vessel of glass, Like light through an oriel window in a room of yellow wood; Sometimes she is the colour of lions, of sand in the fire of noon, Sometimes Poems of Love bruised with shadows as the afternoon. I have seen your love, touched it, Love is beautiful and great. Under the kitchen-table leg My knee is pressing against his knee. So Anactoria, although you being far away forget us, the dear sound of your footstep and Poems of Love glancing in your eyes would move me more than glitter of Lydian horse or armored tread of mainland infantry. This has blessed me.

Through storm, wind, and heavy rain, It will withstand every pain. It seems in poets, at one time or another, write their way into the hearts of their chosen partners, but sometimes something slightly more unusual happens: June Love is beautiful and great.
